Kattah is a Brazilian band, created in 2006 by Roni Sauaf. The name represents a character that seeks a true vision of the reality, the spiritual union of the world's cultures. The band gained prominence since the beginning of their career, when mixed cultural elements from western and eastern, especially arab songs and brazilian songs with "Heavy Metal", showing a very strong and unique personality.

These differentials attracted the attention of the public and many producers and in 2010 they released the "demo tape" "Eyes Of Sand", followed by the video clip of the song "I Believe", what resulted in Angra's invitation to their european tour in 2011 and that was the first time that they put a brazilian band with them. The result was splendid, the name Kattah had a great repercussion in Europe and countries around the world and also it was considered by many reviews, criticisms and comments, the birth of a great promise for the Heavy Metal world.

“Kattah is the savior of metal”

SITE METAL TEMPLE

In 2013 the band announced that the new album “Lapis Lazuli” would be produced by Roy Z, known for successful works with Bruce Dickinson, Iron Maiden, Rob Halford, Sepultura, Helloween and many other renowned artists. It was also engineered and produced by Andy Haller known for works with Ozzy, System of a Down, Boys to Men and many others.

The album “Lapis Lazuli” was out in 2014 by the Italian label Baker Team/Scarlet Records.

The album was greatly acclaimed by the critic, being even considered “the savior of the metal cause” by a critical of the website “Metal Temple”.

In 2017 the group signed with Planet Music the release of the new album “A Vela” with the digital distribution and support of Sony Music.

In 2022, by Atração and Palco 1 Entreterimento label, produced by Roni Sauaf, Kattah released the album "Master Bacico", with 10 new songs on all digital platforms and a music video on Youtube.

PRESS HIGHLIGHTS

"I always believed in a hypothetical savior of the Metal cause provided by the new world someday ... If "Eyes of Sand" was more than a convincing disc, then the brand new "Lapis Lazuli" is the confirmation of the future perspectives for this talented combo, the birth of a great promise for the Heavy Metal world... So you are warned, don't lose on the opportunity to catch this phenomenal band".

SITE METAL TEMPLE (EUROPE)

"I can't say enough of this album and how much I enjoyed it and how much I appreciate what Kattah is bringing into the metal genre with their brand of metal. Killer vocals, great guitar work and musical ideas that are unique and different. Look out for Kattah's album Lapis Lazuli October 27th 2014. This needs to be in everyone's collection".

SITE CAPITAL CHAOS (EUA)

"In places it feels like you could be listening to something by Queensryche, Iron Maiden, or Helloween, but the album does have it's own unique sound and listening to it is a genuine pleasure. Kattah have created an impressive album and one that deserves to be heard by as many people as possible
